the study of lifelong education brings to light aspects of education which go beyond the purely intellectual sphere into all dimensions of being these dimensions assume great importance for individuals seeking to develop capacities which will enable them to cope successfully with the challenges they will confront throughout life and to participate constructively in the larger processes of development the subjects covered include communication corporal man time space art man as citizen the ethical domain technology and the scientific spirit and from these papers emerges the unifying theme of the interrelationship between morality and technology this relationship poses the vital question of how individuals should decide which of the new technologies that proliferate in contemporary society is likely to be beneficial to humankind and which destructive the book is the result of a collective project undertaken by the unesco institute of education uie the approach adopted is new in two respects first each theme is treated in terms of learning and second each is related to the others in a global and transdisciplinary view of personal development it is written by experts from various countries who are known internationally for their outstanding contributions to research into the problems of learning as a basis for lifelong education and will be important reading for all those involved in the study and practice of lifelong education the time has passed when learning was identified purely as a process involving the ability to store and recall knowledge and facts and the competence to produce them when required these abilities still seriously concern the potential teacher and this book duly examines them but the e whyse tm and the e howse tm of learning and teaching are now considered as important as the implanting of facts for regurgitation at exam time some children learn more quickly than others some can remember facts more easily and a teacher must ask several fundamental questions in order to understand the factors at work in this learning process where is knowledge stored why do we remember some facts and forget others when are we learning new facts and when are we remembering and adapting knowledge to see it in a new light to help answer these and many other questions a number of learning situations typical in most schools are examined the processes at work in the classrooms are examined and then they are both related to different theories of learning the examination of a series of learning processes should not necessarily involve a choice between them and a feature of this volume is its lack of partiality towards any particular teaching method although the teacher and student will draw their own conclusions
